A Journalist's Retort.

A lawyer, having occupied a journalist's room one night, thought to make a joke at the expense of his host, and sent him the following lines:

"I slept in an editor's last night,
 And found the place was not so tight.
 How I thought I'd found the editor's bed,
 How easily I found the editor's bed.
 The journalist was equal to the occasion,
 And, pointing the following lines, went in to the lawyer:

"If the lawyer slept in the editor's bed,
 And found the place was not so tight,
 How I thought I'd found the editor's bed,
 How easily I found the editor's bed.
 The journalist was equal to the occasion,
 And, pointing the following lines, went in to the lawyer:

The Tale of Ten Travellers.

Ten weary, footsore travellers,
 All in a woe, sought shelter,
 Sought shelter at a wayside inn
 One dark and stormy night.

"Nine beds—no more," the landlord said,
 "Have I to offer you;
 To each of eight a single room,
 But the ninth must sleep for ten."

A din arose. The troubled host
 Could only scratch his head
 For those of ten he had Could occupy one bed.

The puzzled host was soon at ease—
 He was a clever man—
 And so to please his guests devised
 This most ingenious plan:

ABODE FOR TEN
 In room marked A two men were placed;
 The third he lodged in B;
 The fourth to C was then assigned—
 The fifth retired to D;
 In E the sixth he tucked away,
 In F the seventh man;
 The eighth and ninth in G and H,
 And then to A he ran.

Wherein the host, as I have said,
 Had laid two travellers by,
 Then taking one—the tenth and last,
 He lodged him in A.

Nine single rooms—a room for each—
 Were made to serve for ten,
 And this it is that puzzles me,
 And many wiser men.

The Shady Side.

Philadelphia News.
 Miss Brown, who is no longer young,
 was visiting Miss Moore for her foolishness
 in carrying a parcel, which Miss Brown said was useless and a piece of affectation.
 "I never carry a parcel," she said.
 "No," replied Miss Moore, "people on the shady side of life have no time for them."

Love and Hard Cash is Dilemma.

St. Louis News.
 A young man of this country, whose girl went back on him and yet refused to give up the engagement ring, said for her, it whereupon her father and the young man for the treachery and cool oil that were burned in the parlor while the love-making were going on, for the male that the young man ate at the house during his courtship, and for the father and son that was fed to his horse during the same time. The case was decided in the old man's favor.

The first lady trouble for the season
 among saw mills broke out at the Occoia and Au Sable, Mich., mills on Tuesday.
 All the mills are at a standstill.

The Cullen Witness.

"Do you know the prisoner well?"
 asked the attorney.

"Never knew him sick," replied the witness.

"No, sir," said the lawyer sternly.
 "Now, if you ever see the prisoner
 at the bar?"

"Took many a drink with him at the bar."

"Answer my question, sir," yelled the lawyer, "How long have you known the prisoner?"

"From two feet up to five feet ten inches."

"Will the court make the?"

"I have Judge," said the witness anticipating the lawyer, "I have answered the question. I knowed the prisoner when he was a boy two feet long and a man five feet ten."

"Your Honor—"

"It's a fact Judge; I'm under oath," persisted the witness.

The lawyer arose placed both hands on the table in front of him, spread his legs apart, leaned his body over the table
 and said:

"Will you tell the court what you know about ten cases?"

"That ain't his name."

"What ain't his name?"

"Case."

"Who said it was?"

"You did. You wanted to know what I knew about this case—his name is Smith."

"Your Honor," yelled the attorney,
 "plucking his head out by the roots," "Will you make this man answer?"

"Witness," said the Judge, "you must answer the question put you."

"Land o' Goshes! Judge, hain't I been doing it? Let the blamed case say I am, I'm ready."

"Then," said the lawyer, "don't beat around the bush anymore. You and this man have been friends?"

"Never," promptly replied the witness.

"What! Wasn't you summoned here as a friend?"

"No, sir. I was summoned here as a Prosecutor. My only friend of the name of Smith is an old Irish Baptist without a drop of Quaker in him."

"Stand down," yelled the lawyer disgusted.

"Hey?"

"Stand down."

"Can't do it, sir. I'll sit down or stand up—"

"Hearst," remove that man from the box." Witness retires muttering: "Well if it ain't the thickest-headed case I ever laid my eyes on."

Cleveland News.
 Beecher wants to be counted against Blaine in 1896. It is well known that the Plymouth preacher is given to strange vagaries, but we hardly suppose his soul as a better world than to play repeat a phrase to a group of his that the Independents must to beat Blaine by fraud?

Speculation.

"What other business do you follow besides speculating?" was asked of an old colored man.

"Speculating a little."

"How speculate?"

"When do you get the chickens?"

"My boys fetch 'em in."

"Where do they get 'em?"

"I don't know, but I feel 'em no longer my property, but I've got time to
 as I was going to inquire of my boy
 but a 'vival come an' tuk up all my time."

Don't Horry.

The bustling, hurrying man, as a matter of fact, is a poor worker. Too much of his steam is expended in kicking up dust. The habit of hurrying and of feeling in a hurry is fatal to good work and diminishes the amount of work a good man can accomplish. The men who accomplish most never seem in a hurry, no matter how much they have to do. They are not troubled for lack of time, for they make the most of the minutes by working cool, methodical manner, finishing each job properly and not expending their energies in haste. System will accomplish more than misdirected energy.

Indians and Cattle-Ranching.

The Winnipeg Sun gives the particulars of an interview with Mr. I. G. Baker, of St. Louis, the well-known trader at the Northwest of the United States. He says
 we gather that he is not favorably impressed with the prospects of civilizing the Indians. He says:

"I am inclined to the belief, after careful study of the character of the Indian, that it is a hard matter indeed to civilize a full-blooded one. I have rarely known of any real progress being made in that direction, except when they are taken as children, as the United States Government sometimes takes them and educates them almost from childhood. Sometimes they are taken in batches of one and two hundred and educated by the Government, but when they are taken from their tribes and sent to the reservation, they rarely take any interest in the work. Of course there are exceptions to the rule. I would not however, despair altogether, as generations of a patient labor may work a reform, but it is a thankless, tedious job."

"Do you not think the Indian tribes which still exist in the great Northwest?"

"A very great drawback indeed, for it serves to discourage anyone who may be inclined to settle in that section. If an Indian attempts to secure food by cultivating land, his neighbors (the Indians) will not be discouraged. They know that Indian work the seed out of the ground after it is sown. Then, you see, the Indian has little to live to work."

"What he says in reference to the Indian agents of the United States is equally applicable to those employed by our own Government."

"The Government knows little of the matter, however, for every year Indian agents appointed to a given district report to the Department of Indian Affairs, claiming especially to be doing a splendid business, while the Indians in his charge and the excellent progress they are making on his side, etc. etc. The Department knows nothing of the matter, and in their downward course."

"He believes in the great future for the cattle-living industry of our Northwest,"
 and says:

"I think it is to be the great industry of the country, and is a developing rapidly now. You can take the great sweep of country close from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and you can have over a thousand miles in length of grazing country. There is Texas the best grass land in Colorado, the largest Wyoming larger still, in Montana still larger, while in the Canadian Northwest the best land to be had on the North American continent. Hence the matter up and found that it is the best land in the world for cattle on the western prairie. It is a goodly prize."
